E. N. SEATON, Chairman.
[illegible] Secretary.

Sheridan was the most picturesque figure of the war. While his services hardly equalled those of Grant, Sherman and Thomas, he showed with them the qualities of a great commander. Like Grant he never knew when he was whipped like Sherman, he had quick appreciation of the strategy of war and like Thomas he had the implicit confidence of the soldiers. In the earliest part of the war General Phil. Kearney was the dashing cavalry soldier. At its close Sheridan stood preeminent among all the brave men as a leader and a fighter. Many generals won high reputations as corps of division commanders, but Sheridan in his Shenandoah campaign of 1864 and by his movements in Appomattox showed ability to handle independent command. No general had the dash and magnetic power to change the defeat at Winchester into a victory. When he led, the soldiers knew victory was before them. With the keenest military knowledge of the art of war, he never was satisfied simply to command. His favorite place was at the head of the column. He preferred to say "come" rather than "go."

His life began and ended earlier than that of his great associates. But if was long and fruitful if we judge by the brilliancy of his achievements and the high position he has reached. President Cleveland, in happy phrase, has said, "[illegible] to his achievements will struggle for the mastery over his grave."

The Rev. Dr. Storrs has written a long letter to justify his refusal to support McKinley's free whiskey plank. But support of Harrison does not involve this. Harrison and [illegible] are putting the proper issues before the country. Dr. Storrs is evidently coming to this view. The following extracts set forth his grievances and also show that he is likely to land in the republican camp:

* * * * * * *

This does not imply, however, that I like the platform set forth at Chicago any better now than a month ago. That platform says practically, as I understand it, "Keep the tariff as it is, increase it if need be for further protection to particular industries and reduce the revenue, if it continue too large, by taking off the internal taxes on tobacco and whiskey." In the second of these conditional provisions the platform seems to take, in substance, the ground which was presented in the democratic platform of four years ago, against which I then argued and voted, and I am wholly unable to shift my position so suddenly and completely.

I believe, still, that the tax on whiskey hampers its manufacture, discourages and reasonably limits its use. It is, at any rate, a kind of natural protest against the unchecked consumption of this pernicious article and for moderation in the use of an economical. I desire to have it maintained and unsparingly collected. It represents the best sentiment of [illegible] should, on the question, have [illegible] that "what would [illegible] added, not a general commonplace [illegible], approving temperance and morality, by which evil is to be done outside of a national or an asylum [illegible] even between hearty and unequivocal [illegible] of the efforts made in many states and made chiefly by republicans to limit the sale of intoxicants by imposing high li-census fees on those engaged in the business. This is the one official question sparkling in our politics and presenting itself in the present campaign. The answer to it should be not theoretic, in the cloudy but prompt, practical, and governing, on the lines of salutary social regulation; and it is on occasion of [illegible] found ready that the party which faced [illegible] which regards the [illegible] should have failed to see and to serve the great opportunity to declare "on and [illegible]. The [illegible] appears to me to have been the [illegible] distinctly untrue to the best and noblest traditions of the party and to have quite disregarded that force called conscience and persistent ally.

My present political position is, no matter of special concern to any one but myself, but it may be [illegible] stated in this way. I [illegible] do not agree with the Chicago platform on important points. I do not agree [illegible] Mr. Cleveland in 1888 [illegible] said in substance and remember. We accept the platform, Mr. Storrs, but spit on the platform. There is no occasion how I may [illegible] of conscientious [illegible] certainly apply to [illegible] and [illegible] the previous history of [illegible] in the looks very much as if [illegible] to recognize the competing party and at least more [illegible] At the same time practical results on the important things in politics, and [illegible] the currents and counter currents of trade and politics swirling around us remembering that platforms are no despotic control over the finelligent life of a party, I am still earnestly disposed to feel that the national welfare will be more likely to be advanced, on the lines which Grimmond and myself have taken, if the republican candidates shall be elected in [illegible] rather than [illegible] of one's own party while not [illegible] the other, is a situation which has disadvantages; but it has also its own freedom of outlook, its pleasant sense of friendship to other minds holding substantially a similar position, perhaps its own opportunities of good influence.

I am quite content with it, while holding my mind still open for further light, of which "the words" give no end of chance. Ever faithfully yours,

S. S. STORRS.

Railroad Employes Combine.

MINNEAPOLIS, August 6.—The second general meeting of railway employes to consider a proposition to form a confederation of the Locomotive Engineers, Firemens' and Brakemens' Brotherhoods and Switchmens' Mutual Aid associations convened here yesterday. The gathering included representatives from eighteen divisions of engineers, thirteen lodges of firemen, eight lodges of brakemen and four lodges of switchmen, representing between 20,000 and 30,000 men. The meeting was almost unanimous in favor of amalgamation, and steps will be taken to further the result.

Henry George Talks.

NEW YORK, August 6.—The followers of Henry George's idea by the number of 500 met in the Cooper Union to-night. Resolutions were adopted endorsing tariff reform and the nomination of Grover Cleveland for president. Henry George eulogized President Cleveland's tariff message and declared it to be a vital step in the direction of a single tax theory.

LONDON, August 6.—The report is circulated that Justice Day has notified the government that owing to the objections made to him he will refuse to serve on the commission to inquire into the Titanic disaster. [illegible] Justice Wills [illegible] named for him.

Hunting for War Portraits.

Mr. Hall [illegible] has had experience [illegible] that, after hunting for years for a certain picture, and finally obtaining it, two or three others of a similar kind would suddenly emerge from obscurity and come easily into his possession. There are a number of pictures, however, that appear to elude his search, notwithstanding he is known by thousands printed alphabetical lists of their names throughout the country. Occasionally the artist stumbles upon what he wants in the most unexpected manner. The other day, in exploring the contents of an out of the way book stand, he found an illustrated volume printed in 1863 which he had abandoned all hope of obtaining. "What's the price?" "Oh, take it for a dollar." Mr. Hall said he could scarcely get his money out fast enough, and when, after securing possession of the book, he [illegible] remarked, "This is a pretty good day's work—I have given you twenty dollars if you'd asked it," the dealer was tired enough to tear his hair and wouldn't sell him anything else.—New York Herald.

Gladstone and Salisbury.

Gladstone and Salisbury are [illegible] in the matter of high churchism. For many years until the present political [illegible] arose these two great Englishmen were intimate private friends, though political foes. Both are patrons of church livings, both are deep read theologians, both hold the ultra High Church doctrine as I both have, at least they used to have, a longing for reunion of the Catholic and Protestant communions under the wing of the Old Catholic movement favored by Dollinger. They used to visit each other and enjoy foraging among the musty tomes of the old library at Hatfield house, but, also, the poison of politics has killed the old time amity of two good men, and their friendship is a thing of the past.

Compensation in Course of Time.

"De Lawd let my throat get sore for those oysters," said an angry customer in a restaurant. "What's the matter?"

"Orders ahead, sah," explained the waiter. "You'll fin' dem raw oysters worry outen, sah, fo' sore throat."—Life.

English Railway Employes.

When one reads some of the facts disposed to by railway servants, it becomes simply marvelous how the railway system is worked at all without [illegible] catastrophes [illegible] (twice a year). One goods guard [illegible] to [illegible] on duty at 9 a. m. [illegible] at work on small jobs until 6 p. m. and then started on a trip lasting, out and in, eighteen hours—twenty-seven hours' duty altogether. And the work of these goods guards involves a constant strain on the attention, a great deal of mental exertion and not a little bodily work.

The engine drivers, whose hours are even worse, because they have to examine the engine minutely before and after starting, have, of course, still more severe mental strain. An engine driver has to be constantly watching, not only signals, but the permanent way, the trains in front, the pressure gauge of his engine, the boiler and the machinery generally. And one man on a North British line asserts that since October last he has been at this work for fourteen hours and fifty minutes per day on [illegible] per week. This sort of thing is not exactly calculated to make a passenger feel comfortable.—London Truth.

Entirely Satisfactory.

Undertaker to widow after the funeral—I trust, my dear madam, that you found my services satisfactory?

Widow (through her sobs)—Mr. Mould, I was very much pleased with everything.

Postmaster-General Dickinson said that he was a great general and had the sympathy of many who had always accompanied the greatness. He added that he, in with an affection in which there was something of peculiar tenderness. No man was more universally loved and known, and all at the capital will miss him sadly.

Ex-Secretary McCulloch of the interior department, who was colonel of a Minnesota regiment during the war and Major General Wilcox, who commanded the regiment in division in A. P. Hill's corps spoke in terms of warm eulogy of the deceased commander. Senator Plumb did the same and told several interesting incidences of the war, times [illegible] General Sheridan.

Biographical Sketch.

A few weeks before his death [illegible] Grant was sitting on the piazza of his [illegible] residence at Saratoga. With him was his friend James N. Matthews of Buffalo. Phil Sheridan was the topic of conversation. "Sheridan," said Gen. Grant "was a great soldier. He was as great as Cæsar or Von Moltke." "Yes," he added, after a moment's pause, "he was greater than Cæsar or Von Moltke. He was great in the field, great at the council board. He could not only [illegible] he could take the field and win them."

"Philip Henry Sheridan," said another, "was the Murat and Ney, both, of our own late civil war. Ready to leave a cavalry or an infantry charge, he was equally the man to overlook the operation of a vast army and move its parts so as to achieve victory. In fact Sheridan, impetuous and apparently rash, when necessity called for vigorous action and daring deeds, was cool, calm, collected, quiet, [illegible] when overlooking a field where he was engaged; no eye could [illegible] saw a flaw in an enemy's movements or was quicker to take advantage of it. Besides the education, Sheridan had the [illegible] and genius of a true soldier."

General Sheridan was born in Somerset Ohio, March 6, 1831. His parents were poor and for a long time lived in a one story frame building in South street in that town. John Sheridan, Phil's father, [illegible] some money as a railroad contractor but invariably met with ill luck. In 1850, after Phil had saved some money from his army pay, he bought a [illegible] acres of land near Somerset and gave his parents the money to build a home. Throughout all his career General Sheridan paid his mother a yearly [illegible], of course, when prevented by his military duties.

Phil Sheridan as a boy had but few opportunities. The family was poor and his school days were few. He was [illegible] a leader among his associates, however. His [illegible] when not at school, or engaged in doing chores was largely devoted to the juvenile [illegible] where a charge of from [illegible] to five pins constituted the admission fee. Phil was invariably the [illegible] performer, and if a [illegible] was attributed to [illegible] the feat of going into the [illegible] which was a large box with wood en slats nailed on the front side and [illegible] contained two or three dogs and a [illegible] Phil [illegible] the dogs [illegible] fancy to fighting and had a company of eighteen or twenty of his playmates [illegible] old resident of Somerset [illegible] [illegible] days.

Phil was a little bit of a fellow but I guess he whipped every fighting boy in Somerset. He became early in life a great daring horseback rider. His first experience as a cavalryman was on the bare back of an ugly beast without a strap of leather anywhere about him. The critter started into a terrible run and did not halt until he came to Lavern some ten miles away. There he ran in the stable shed. Sheridan clung on like an Indian and did not seem to be in the least frightened. When asked how he had managed to stick the beast out so well Phil had been told how to do it. He just hung on his neck and stuck my knees in his side. No one had ever before succeeded in staying on the horse's back.

Before Phil was 10 he received a serious [illegible] This was from the old school master, Patrick McNulty, who was a right good schoolmaster, but a terrible [illegible] disciplinarian, not to say despot. For some [illegible] Sheridan had [illegible] [illegible] to school earlier than the rest. He made his complaint on account by arranging a bucket of ice cold water over the door in such a way that the next comer, who was sure to be Mr McNally, was cruelly doused. After the enraged teacher had shaken satisfactory pupils as they entered the school room, a judgment of conviction was passed on the [illegible] Sheridan [illegible] [illegible] Catholic boy. The [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] until the [illegible] [illegible] Phil all the way home and there had been in turn chased up an apple tree by the dead boy's fine Newfoundland dog. After [illegible] minutes of [illegible] and [illegible] the shooting, and [illegible] and the boy called off the dustful dog Sheridan always said that McNally kept his word with him strictly, but he [illegible] to take two whippings for every offense committed in that school.

At the age of 12 Phil had to go to work. He found employment in a hardware store in the village kept by John Talbot, with whom he remained four months. He then obtained a place as a clerk for Pugh & Dittoe in the dry goods business in connection with them until 1845. He seemed pretty well satisfied with the mercantile pursuits until he [illegible] the [illegible] vacancy at West Point, which [illegible] the [illegible] of the district were [illegible] General Ritchie, the congressman, [illegible] with the [illegible] Phil sat right down and wrote to General Ritchie, [illegible] for [illegible] application without a [illegible] and assistance or even advice. Ritchie knew who the Sheridans were, [illegible] constituents and he thought it [illegible] to let [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Fiftieth Congress.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, August 6.—As soon as the reading of the journal was concluded, Senator Edmunds rose and said:

I ask unanimous consent to offer at this time resolutions on a subject which every senator will understand.

Resolved, That the senate has learned with profound regret of the death of Philip H. Sheridan, late general of the armies of the United States.

Resolved, That the senate hereby expresses its grateful sense of his great and patriotic services in the cause of his country, its deep sensibility of the loss [illegible] death, and its sympathy with his family in their bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family of the deceased.

Unanimous consent having been given Senator Edmunds said: It is quite unnecessary for any senator to submit any observation in support of these resolutions. The career of General Sheridan has been so conspicuous, so grand, so noble, and so patriotic that any words which I could use in respect of his memory or in praise of his career would be like gilding refined gold or painting the lilies. I therefore, for my part, leave them to the judgment of the senate without any further observations.

Subsequently a bill was introduced by Senator Farwell and referred to the committee on pensions, granting a pension of $5000 a year to Mrs. Sheridan.

Senator Blair introduced a joint resolution [illegible] committee on foreign relations, requesting the president to open negotiations looking towards a settlement of all differences between England and this country, and to a political union between Canada and the United States.

The senate resumed consideration of the fisheries treaty in open executive session, and was addressed by Senator Vance in favor of its ratification. He said: The simple truth was that the presidential election was coming and the republican party wished to raise a row against Great Britain and get the Irish vote.

The president's message announcing the death of General Sheridan having been read, Senator Hawley rose and said: Nothing I can say, Mr. President, is needed to set forth the loss which the country has sustained by the death of that able, brilliant, magnificent soldier and beloved general, Philip H. Sheridan. I have just learned of the course taken by the house and I now send to the desk a resolution for which I ask immediate consideration.

Resolved, That the chair is requested to appoint a committee of seven senators to attend the funeral services of the late General Sheridan.

The resolution was adopted and Senators Hawley, Manderson, Cullom, Stewart, Hampton, Gibson, and Gray were appointed. The senate then adjourned.

HOUSE.

In his opening prayer in the house this morning the chaplain said:

Oh, Eternal God, with the nation, we stand awe stricken to-day by the startling intelligence that the illustrious career of the general of the army is ended. The brilliant story of his achievements is interwoven in the annals of the country and he has come to the bar of history. We commend to the Almighty protection and fatherhood the wife who has been widowed, and the children who have been made fatherless.

The routine of business was interrupted by a message from the president announcing the death of General Sheridan.

Wheeler, of Alabama, said that this was the third time in the history of the government that the president has announced the death of the commander of the armies of the United States. He had prepared a resolution appropriate to the occasion but was informed that the military committee had agreed upon some resolutions, and he would refrain from offering his.

Hooker of Mississippi then asked unanimous consent to offer the following:

Resolved, That this house has learned with profound grief of the death of General Philip Sheridan, the commander of the armies of the United States.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased this house do now adjourn.

Resolved, That the speaker of the house be directed to transmit to the widow of the deceased a copy of these resolutions and the assurance of the sympathy of the house in the loss which she has sustained in common with the people of the country.

Resolved, That the speaker of this [illegible] conveyance of such [illegible] conformity with the foregoing resolutions, and that the usual [illegible] be appropriate mark of respect to the memory of General Sheridan.

[illegible] then addressed the house in eulogy of the deceased soldier. He [illegible] the career of people who had contributed to world in the old countries and in the new, the greatest commercial of any people on earth. The career of this distinguished military leader was in [illegible] sweep of the [illegible] to honor was a mark of the [illegible] [illegible] of this country there was [illegible] of [illegible] in [illegible] life that would [illegible] to the [illegible] of the hundred [illegible] of the late General Sheridan [illegible] from [illegible] father the fire and spirit of that great Irish race, that [illegible] since [illegible] from the hearts of all [illegible] race its own. At an early [illegible] graduated from the military academy at West Point, and was [illegible] of cadets in the army. He [illegible] between the states which began in [illegible] position second only to that of the great leader of the federal army. This congress had a few weeks before his death conferred on General Sheridan the distinguished position of general of the armies of the United States. It has been held by few persons and was conferred as a mark of honor and regard for General Sheridan when he yet lay on a bed of sickness which finally became his couch of death. The resolutions were designed to express the universal grief and sorrow of the nation at the death of the commander of the armies of the United States and [illegible] with the bereaved family.

The resolutions were also seconded in behalf of the people of Ohio, by Grosvenor, who said: The fame of Sheridan as a soldier was long and grand enough to be shared in common by the people of the whole United states. It has often been said of Sheridan that he was regarded to some extent as a reckless soldier. About a year ago, while traveling to the soldier's reunion in Ohio he [illegible] [illegible] General Sheridan, who got to talking about this matter and said: "I never made a move in my life that was not studiously and carefully planned and I gave each and all the time and thought that it was possible to give, and there is not a greater mistake than to attribute to me the spirit of dare-devilishness."

Sheridan is dead, said Grosvenor, his memory is the common heritage of the loyal people of the country, and will ultimately be remembered in a peculiar line, the line of war which he adopted, and in which he made himself conspicuous. He has left the American people a sense of his completeness and love, and his memory which will ever live in the estimation of the people.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the house accordingly adjourned.

Campaign oaths seem to be the rage just now. One firm in the city received an invoice of four dozen last week and have eight left.

Prof. A. W. Beasley, of Peoria, Ill., is in the city visiting with his family, who are stopping here for the summer at No. 9 South Weber street.

There will be a regular meeting of the Matt France Hose company Wednesday evening. All members are earnestly requested to be present.

There are undelivered telegrams at the Western Union telegraph office for Geo Hollen, B. F. Webster, E. S. Holmes, Eugene Lent and E. E. Hopkins.

Mrs. S. J. Menzies, who resides at the corner of Pike's Peak avenue and Corona street, advertises the massage treatment. Invalids may do well to consult her.

Rev. H. H. Bell, who has so acceptably filled the pulpit of the United Presbyterian church the past summer, has returned to his theological studies in an eastern institution.

Mr. Jacob Smith, who is employed at Bartlett's blacksmith shop, was called to Denver yesterday on receipt of a telegram announcing that his brother had been seriously injured.

Mr. J. S. Allen, who has been acting as a substitute for the mail carriers, proceeded on his duties as a regular carrier yesterday. His district is all that portion of the city south of Dale street.

Mr. E. D. Redmond and Mr. David McShane were elected special policemen without pay at the meeting of the city council last night. Mr. McShane was made a policeman that he might protect the property of the sewer contracting firm, to which he belongs, from being destroyed by malicious persons. Mr. Redmond is a newly elected constable and merely assumes the duties of a policeman.

The meeting of base ball managers in this city yesterday was not as well attended as was expected, owing to the short notice. However, Pueblo was represented and arrangements have been made for a series of games beginning Saturday, August 11. Denver will be admitted as soon as they are able to secure enclosed grounds, and patrons of base ball will see some fine games between the three towns.

The funeral of Mr. Val Berwynd occurred from the undertaking establishment of Hallett & Baker yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. He will be remembered by many as a clerk at the clothing establishment of Perkins & Holbrook for the past two years. He was about 35 years of age and was a very bright young man, honored and respected by all. He was a German by birth, and so far as known had no relatives in this country.

Colorado Springs will cross bats with the reorganized Pueblo team next Saturday, and a fine game may be looked for. Each club has won two games and are now struggling for the lead. Pueblo has a fine battery in Hunt and Thorne from Del Norte. They defeated our team a week ago last Sunday in Pueblo by a score of 14 to 6, but our boys say they can not do it so easy on Sunday a special train will leave the Santa Fe depot promptly at 1:30 o'clock, to convey the two clubs to Pueblo where they play a game that afternoon.

BEST LINE EAST.
The Union Pacific is in all ways the best line East, on account of the fast time that is made and the second to none service they render. Also the cross connection that is made in Union depots with the trunk lines from Kansas City, Council Bluffs, St. Louis and Chicago, reaching all the principal cities in the east. The U. P. Ry. is also the short line to the Pacific Coast, running two trains daily west and four trains to the east daily. The evening trains from Colorado Springs make close connections there in Denver with the Fast Mail for the east.

You can fool some of the people all the time and you can fool all of the people some of the time, but you can not fool all the people all the time.

Merchants who publish silly advertisements should ponder on this profitably.

Is it better to deal with Clothiers who claim everything and show very little, or to patronize a house that professes only what it can perform?

We have a great stock of things that men and boys wear. Our Clothing is carefully selected and well made. Choose your apparel HERE, because we can fit you, please you and after you once learn the merits of our goods we believe you will continue to use them.
